About ECO Canada

Environmental Careers Organization (ECO Canada) is a not-for-profit corporation established in 1992 as part of Canada's Sector Council Initiative. ECO Canada is focused on identifying, communicating, and meeting the needs of environmental practitioners, employers, educators, and students. Its vision is to build the world's leading environmental workforce.

ECO Canada has supported Canada's environmental workforce by establishing professional development resources, training programs and educational partnerships, conducting in-depth labour market research and providing the largest industry-specific job board.

ECO Canada's programs and services are developed through strong national partnerships, consultative strategic planning, and ongoing labour market research. Its labour market research provides valuable insights into environmental career trends, which can be used by governments, educators, youth, and industry partners to make decisions and formulate strategies. Introduction

The creation of this directory is motivated by a recognition of the invaluable contributions Indigenous-led environmental consulting and services make towards sustainable development, environmental stewardship, and the reconciliation process in Canada. Indigenous peoples have been custodians of their traditional lands for millennia, possessing deep-rooted knowledge and understanding of local ecosystems, sustainable practices, and environmental management that are essential in today's context of global environmental challenges.

This directory serves multiple critical purposes:

- Highlighting Indigenous Expertise: It showcases the breadth and depth of Indigenous-led firms in the environmental sector, highlighting their unique expertise, services, and contributions. Doing so aims to elevate these firms to a broader audience, including government bodies, private companies, and non-profit organizations seeking specialized and culturally informed environmental consulting services.
- Fostering Partnerships: The directory acts as a bridge, fostering partnerships between Indigenous firms and other entities that can benefit from their insights and services. Such collaborations can lead to more sustainable and effective solutions for environmental management, conservation, and restoration projects grounded in Indigenous knowledge and contemporary science.
- Supporting Economic Development: By promoting Indigenous-led businesses, the directory contributes to the economic development of Indigenous communities. It aligns with broader objectives of self-determination and empowerment, allowing communities to harness their expertise to benefit their people and the land.
- Advancing Reconciliation and Recognition: The inclusion and promotion of Indigenous-led environmental consulting and services is a step towards recognizing Indigenous peoples' rights, territories, and knowledge. It underscores the importance of integrating Indigenous perspectives in environmental decision-making processes, essential for reconciliation and the respectful acknowledgment of Indigenous sovereignty.
- Enhancing Environmental Outcomes: Indigenous-led firms are at the forefront of blending Indigenous knowledge with contemporary environmental science, crafting innovative solutions for conservation, resource management, and sustainability challenges. This integration respects the strengths of both knowledge systems—Indigenous knowledge's holistic, place-based understandings of ecosystems and Western science's analytical and global perspectives—creating a more comprehensive and practical approach to addressing environmental issues.

This directory is not merely a compilation of services but a testament to Indigenous communities' resilience, expertise, and leadership in safeguarding the environment. It serves as a resource for all Canadians committed to building a more sustainable, equitable, and inclusive future in harmony with the natural world. Through this directory, we aim to amplify the voices and visions of Indigenous environmental leaders, contributing to a collective effort that honours the land and its stewards.

How to use this directory

This directory is organized into two main sections: Environmental Consultation Services and Remediation Services, and Sustainability Initiatives. Within each section, companies are listed alphabetically for easy reference. While each company is based in a specific province, many operate across other provinces and territories, offering their services beyond their immediate location. This expansive reach allows for various environmental and sustainability solutions across Canada.

SECTION 1- Environmental Consulting and Remediation Services

Our 2024 Indigenous Environmental company directory highlights Environmental Consulting Services, emphasizing their crucial role in guiding businesses and governments through the complexities of environmental management and protection. These services offer expert advice on assessing environmental risks, conducting thorough audits, and devising strategies to minimize the impact of industrial and developmental activities on ecosystems. They are vital in assisting organizations to adhere to environmental laws and regulations, avoiding legal consequences and safeguarding their reputations. Moreover, environmental consultants are instrumental in creating sustainability plans that harmonize economic development with environmental conservation. Their expertise is essential for preserving biodiversity, ensuring the availability of clean water and air, and advocating for the sustainable utilization of natural resources. Environmental consulting services become crucial partners in preserving our planet for future generations by guiding organizations to adopt best practices in environmental management.

Our 2024 Indigenous Environmental company directory includes Remediation Services to underscore its indispensable role in environmental management and public health protection. Remediation services specialize in cleaning and restoring sites contaminated by hazardous substances, pollutants, or industrial waste. Employing various methods and technologies, they work to remove harmful contaminants from soil, groundwater, and surface water, safeguarding human health and the environment. This work is particularly critical for tackling the challenges posed by historical industrial pollution, halting further environmental harm, and making contaminated lands usable once more. By targeting pollution at its source, remediation services play a crucial role in environmental conservation, helping businesses and governments comply with strict regulations for contamination clean-up. Their efforts are fundamental in repairing ecosystems, protecting community well-being, and promoting responsible and sustainable use of land resources.

Company Vision & Mission	Vision: To establish an Indigenous led, staffed, and owned organization made up of professionals leading and implementing change in their communities. Mission: We listen first and cultivate knowledge to create resilient solutions for generations to come.
Expertise/services provided	We can provide most services in the environmental field. Please contact for details. Current examples: Canada's Ocean Supercluster (OSC) Two-Eyed Seeing Initiative – SOAR with its project partners, Dillon Consulting, Indigrow Business Solutions, and the OSC, set out to enable OSC and its membership to develop meaningful relationships with Indigenous Communities and Entrepreneurs to drive participation into OSC programming. The Initiative included a series of Workshops, Cultural Competency Training for OSC staff and its Membership, and Indigenous and non-Indigenous Membership Engagement, which culminated in the Development of the Indigenous Partnership Program and the Two-Eyed Seeing Framework. First Nations Drinking Water Settlement, Community Engagement and Claims Support – SOAR is providing Project Management and Logistics Support on a cross-functional team tasked with providing in-person Claims support in various First Nation Communities across Northern Manitoba and Northwest Ontario. Tlicho Government Development Department, Services Support – SOAR provides ongoing capacity, support, and mentorship to the Tlicho Government Development Department (NWT), we assist with a range of critical tasks. Kinross Gold Mine Practices Technical Review – SOAR is participating in an advisory role to a technical review team seeking to incorporate Indigenous perspectives in advance of mine development or an EIA, for example, to build trust and foster meaningful relationships, through a new approach to old resource extraction paradigms that would normally fall back on the Duty to Consult as the basis for Indigenous participation. Papetsakihtasu – SOAR is a key project partner in this ongoing community-led project to study effects of colonization on members of Bilijk First Nation and the environment. In 2023 the project collected Indigenous Knowledge on the impacts of nearby dams, analyzing fish tissues for contaminants, and increasing community capacity through field staff training and mentorship.

SECTION 2- Sustainability Initiatives

Our 2024 Indigenous Environmental firm directory, spotlight on Sustainability Initiatives, underscores their critical role in driving the environmental and social responsibility agenda across various industries. Through efforts like reducing waste, adopting renewable energy, ensuring fair working conditions, and actively supporting local communities, companies not only lessen their ecological footprint but also bolster societal well-being. These practices not only aid in safeguarding the environment but also enhance the company's reputation, potentially translating into economic gains. Companies contribute significantly to the health of the planet and the creation of a more equitable society when they embed sustainability deeply into their operational ethos.

This commitment is crucial for businesses determined to make a meaningful difference in their sectors and communities, setting a benchmark for responsible business conduct. Embracing a broad spectrum of sustainability practices, from waste minimization and resource conservation to community support and equitable labour practices, signifies a deep-rooted commitment to building a more sustainable world for future generations.
